

ABSTRACT

Methods of preventing or treating the adverse consequences of the systemic inflammatory response syndrome (SIRS) and various other conditions characterized by imbalanced responses to inflammatory processes or stimuli, including sepsis and burns, conditions which may be ameliorated by increased local concentrations of adenosine in selected regions using adenosine deaminase inhibitors are provided.